This enthralling modern fairy tale from Caldecott and Newbery Honor winner Tomie dePaola and debut illustrator Doug Salati celebrates the greatest power of all: love. In a small kingdom along an ancient road, a bell rings out. The beloved king has died, leaving his magnificent and powerful Imperial Robe to his heir, the young prince. But when the prince's jealous older half-brother steals the Imperial Robe, slashing it to bits, the prince can no longer rule—and the small kingdom is in great danger. Now the young prince must find another source of power and of strength—and he finds it in a surprising place. A coming-of-age tale of sixteen-year-old Eric Teo, who has a fraught relationship with his parents, particularly his mother, Clara, a successful financial adviser who imposes her values on Eric. Through an inadvertent conversation, Eric learns that he has a paternal grandmother whom no one had mentioned before. The novel pivots on Eric's search for his grandmother. Along the way, he befriends Rajah, who is blind and from a much less privileged family. The two boys become firm friends although they're from different backgrounds and vastly different social standing. Rajah helps Eric discover his own strength and capabilities in Eric's search for his identity. Sometimes something special happens when two people meet - the result of such a meeting is in your hands. A Small Book about a Big Problem by biblical counselor and psychologist Edward T. Welch guides readers to look carefully at how their anger affects them and others through short, daily meditations. In a fifty-day reading plan journey, Welch unpacks anger while encouraging and teaching readers to respond with patience to life's difficulties. This biblically wise resource is a useful tool for pastors, counselors, and lay helpers who are working with people who struggle with a short fuse. In A Small Book about a Big Problem, Welch invites readers to consider how everyone can find anger in their actions and attitudes, but Jesus, the Prince of Peace, is the only one who can empower his people to grow in patience, peace, and wholeness. How many times today have you been irritated? Frustrated? Anger is so common—yet it also hurts. It not only leaves a mark on us, but it also leaves a mark on others. The wounds we inflict on ourselves and others because of anger—loss of intimacy, trust, security, and enjoyment in our closest relationships—give us compelling reasons to look closely at our anger and lift our eyes to Christ. Come back to Burton, and fall in love in a small town all year long . . . Eleven holiday-themed, stand-alone romances that take place in Burton, Georgia, the small town that's big on romance!

Alexandria When my agent arranges a fake engagement for me with Matt Westin, the hot new country singer, it doesn't seem like a bad idea. He needs the publicity, and as an actress on the verge of making it big, I need to be seen in a stable relationship. But when we visit his hometown for Valentine's Day, suddenly I find myself wishing Matt's feelings and passionate words were the real deal. Matt I've known love, and I've known heartbreak. I don't recommend either. But my publicity firm wants me to have a serious girlfriend to go with my love songs, so I'm in the middle of a phony and temporary engagement. It's actually not a bad deal: Alex is fun, and spending time with her isn't a hardship. Until we go back to my hometown so I can play a Valentine's Day show . . . and everything I've been pretending feels all too genuine. A Year of Love in a Small Town is a grouping of stand-alone, small-town steamy romances. While the books all take place in Burton, the setting of the Love in a Small Town series, they can be read without having enjoyed the other series. Winner of the Shirley Jackson Award. London, 1603. Ben Jonson, playwright, poet, satirist . . . detective? Someone is murdering choir boys and Jonson, in the way that only Greer Gilman could write him — "Fie, poetastery." — is compelled to investigate. This is Part II of the story which began with the previous volume, The Ice Meadows, which introduced the Reverend Joseph Stevenson and the many characters and events which shaped his life. As he contends against an impossible wall of denial and the love he feels for his wife and son, he continues to try to maintain a stable home and shepherd a growing congregation in a confusing and troubled world. Although life is a vale of tears and he faces abandonment by the church he has loved since childhood, he continues to strive and gain strength from a compassionate God. With a sense of humor and love of the beauty of creation, he carries on with confidence that the battle has already been won for us. Come back to Burton, and fall in love in a small town all year long . . . Eleven holiday-themed, stand-alone romances that take place in Burton, Georgia, the small town that's big on romance! Regan Jackson McCord has been a jerk as long as I can remember. Except for one memorable night five years ago, back in high school . . . but I try not to think about that. When my mother talks me into going to our town's big New Year's Eve party with Jackson, I'm positive the night is going to be a disaster. Jackson Although I'd never admit it, I've always thought of Regan Hennessey as the one who got away. We had one night together when we were in high school . . . one night that confirmed what I'd long suspected: I was never going to be good enough for Regan. When my mom guilts me into taking Regan to the New Year's Eve party, I can't decide if it's the worst idea ever . . . or my second chance to make her mine. A Year of Love in a Small Town is a grouping of stand-alone, small-town steamy romances. While the books all take place in Burton, the setting of the Love in a Small Town series, they can be read without having enjoyed the other series. This volume problematizes the intentions of early childhood education for sustainability (ECEfS) from two new perspectives - the context of small island states and the bi-directional, intergenerational learning about the environment and sustainability that takes place in a variety of contexts, including the family home and school. It questions how belonging to a small island and the children's home influence learning in the early years of life. In doing so, this book offers new insights and new theoretical perspectives into intergenerational environmental learning in the school, family and beyond. Informed by consideration of the most recent literature in early childhood education and sustainability, this volume also looks at how these informal learning spaces provide young children with the opportunities to enhance further learning in the field, thus portraying the fluidity of intergenerational learning from different theoretical standpoints. It provides a deep insight into ECEfS and intergenerational learning about the environment and environmental issues in early childhood education from a perspective of a small island state by adopting a children's rights perspective. It additionally explores the relationship between early childhood theories, children's rights and postcolonial theory. According to The New York Times, "small businesses generate two-thirds of all new jobs in America". This book gives job-searchers an immediate edge, offering detailed, expert advice on targeting this vast, but often overlooked resource of jobs.
