With the publication of this book, newcomers to the field of steel rolling have a complete introduction to the cold rolling process, including the history of cold rolling, the equipment currently in use, the behavior of the rolling lubricant, the thermal and metallurgical aspects of the subject, mathematical models relating to rolling force and power requirements, strip shape, and the further processing of cold-rolled steel. The first book in print to examine in detail the three components of the cold-rolling process- the mill, the work-piece, and the rolling lubricant- this book can be used as a training manual and as a source for reference and research. The manuscript version of this book has already been in use as a textbook in courses on cold rolling and rolling lubrication and is now published for the benefit of all in-training personnel-both operating and supervisory-in the primary metals industry and for undergraduate and graduate students in metalworking. The interrelationships of the three components, described in terms of mathematical models, are of considerable value to engineers associated with primary metals and metal research, to mill builders, and to electrical equipment suppliers. For plant metallurgists, the book relates product quality to operating conditions; for the steel user and purchaser, it affords insight into the various processes associated with the manufacture of steel sheet and strip. This book aims to contribute to a growing interest amongst psycholinguists and morphologists in the mechanisms of meaning predictability. It presents a brand-new model of the meaning-prediction of novel, context-free naming units, relating the word formation and word interpretation processes. Unlike previous studies, mostly focussed on N+N compounds, the scope of this book is much wider. It not only covers all types of complex words, but also discusses a whole range of predictability-boosting and -reducing conditions. Two measures are introduced, the Predictability Rate and the Objectified Predictability Rate, in order to compare the strength of predictable readings both within a word and relative to the most predictable readings of other coinages. Four extensive experiments indicate inter alia the equal predicting capacity of native and non-native speakers, the close interconnection between linguistic and extra-linguistic factors, the important role of prototypical senses, and the usual dominance of a single central reading. This volume brings together a number of previously unpublished essays that will advance the reader's philosophical understanding of specific aspects of causation, agency and moral responsibility. These are deeply intertwined notions, and a large proportion of the volume is taken up by papers that shed light on their mutual connections or defend certain claims concerning them. The volume investigates several important questions, including: Can causation be perceived? If it can, can it be perceived in any way other than visually? Can the interventionist theory developed by James Woodward offer an adequate account of causation? Is a causal relation a necessary condition for moral responsibility? Can there be a responsibility difference without a causal difference? Are causal ascriptions based on the more primitive language game of blame ascriptions? What can be learnt from the analogy between causal interference and unbreakable processes, on one side, and motivational interferences and "unbreakable" resolutions, on the other side? How can humans be routinely considered responsible for non-deliberated omissions? Should the connection between moral responsibility and the epistemic conditions usually required for moral responsibility to be obtained be weakened? What is the connection between awareness of one's doing and intentional action?
